

Rocky Mountain Hardware

Originally a hardware showroom and distributor, the company quickly began manufacturing fine knobs, pulls, and escutcheons when owners Mark and Patsy Nikum recognized a need existed. The couple wanted designs that would look at home in a rustic log cabin or a Mediterranean villa—like these Luna knobs in white bronze with a light patina. 1030 Airport Way, P.O. Box 4108, Hailey, ID 83333; 888-788-2013; rocky mountainhardware.com. circle 458

Tecnoline

The German company's magnificent range of Bauhaus and art deco hardware is now available stateside. In the mix, a coveted Walter Gropius design and this Wilhelm Wagenfeld cast-brass handle, which hasn't been manufactured since the 1920s. Ironmonger, 122 West Illinois Street, Chicago, IL 60610; 800-621-1937; ironmonger.net. circle 462

Spectra Décor

Seattle artist and jewelry maker Lulu Smith has created a spectacular line of decorative hardware. The shapes in cast pewter, the knobs and pulls are finished with pigmented resin. In addition to a palette of eight colors, a custom color-matching service is available. spectradecor.com. circle 459

Veyko

Wire hangers may have gotten a bad rap à la Joan Crawford, but architect Richard Goloveyko doesn't seem to mind them. His Cornstalk coat rack in satin nickel-plated steel elevates that closet staple to functional art. 216 Fairmount Avenue, Philadelphia, PA 19123; 215-928-1349; veyko.com. circle 460

Waterworks

Midcentury Scandinavian and Italian style teapots gave rise to the company's new collection of pewter bathroom accessories. Simply shaped and hand-crafted, the line features a soap dish, toothbrush holder, cover, wastebasket, and tumbler, plus two trays. Danbury, CT 06810; 800-899-6757; waterworks.com. circle 461